Tree & Pole Climbers, Pads & Straps, Gaffs

What is the difference between a tree and a pole climber? It's based on the length of the gaff (or hook) that is inserted into the wood. Pole climbers, designed for climbing telephone poles and palm trees have a shorter gaff than tree climbers. Artistic Arborist carries the largest assortment of tree and pole climbers and their replacement parts.

Flielines

Flielines are used in combination with climbing saddles and pole climbers. They are snapped into the saddle and wrap around the pole so that the person climbing up the pole is safely secured. You flip the line up as you climb up the pole. We only carry wire-core flip lines for added safety. These are designed to withstand accidental encounters with chain saws... to keep you hanging instead of falling! They come in various lengths with snaps.
